

Wish #1: Material filled pouch--washable crayons, markers, erasers, stickers, highlighters, glue--white paper, given to all students, 779.

- o Here is who we are: University of South Florida students, Rich Lauria, Jacob Parker, and Amanda Anseeuw
- o Here is what we are: Human beings attempting to strengthen dedication to school
- o Here is what is going on: We studied middle schools and found the common denominator, creativity.

It is not enough to just know what is going on; we must apply and do, together!

Dear Alix,

I was introduced to you by my mother, LeAnn Anseeuw, in Larry Lucas Inc. during the March 2007 show. My name is Amanda. I am still honored to have met you. The company you created, an amazing story, entrusts happiness within all American children. You are a truly positive contribution to society, what I hope and inspire to be! Your dynamic designs, from precise eye ball placement to intended color hues, are in a league of their own.

Plan A: Silly sacs! $5.95 x 779 = $4,635.05. Sacs are large enough to hold all supplies, most creative pouch, future goal, would be incredible!

Sacs will be kept in the classroom to brighten current dull environment and increase interest in attending school. A well-crafted academic environment swirls creativity, curricula, and support!

Needed by January 1 for delivery to school January 7.

Your gift will not only help economically disadvantaged children with majority lacking parental support, your company will be included in USF Magazine and in the hearts of 779 middle school students!

If we are seeking our life calling; mine is dedicated to bringing children happiness,

Sincerely,

Amanda Lucia Anseeuw
